Loch Ness' Monster 'Seen' Again Despite Shortage of Scotch

By the Associated Press

INVERNESS, Scotland, April 9.—Despite the shortage of Scotch whisky, some people are reporting seeing the Loch Ness monster again. (North Scotland's 1947 tourist season is just starting.)

To hear them tell it, the thing swooshes through the long narrow lake as fearsomely as ever.

So much for the wartime claim of Mussolini's propaganda staff that a direct bomb hit had destroyed the Loch Ness nightmare. The monster was first reported "seen" in 1933, but was coyly out of sight during most of the war.

J. W. McKillop, Invernessshire County clerk, said he sighted it today.

"The monster was traveling diagonally across the loch," related Mr. McKillop, a sober man. "It traveled at high speed to the other side and submerged about 200 yards off the shore."

Four men in an automobile, drinking habits unknown, also insisted they saw Nessie, as local residents call the monster. One man said it had a gleaming body and one hump. The others said they saw two humps.

Earlier accounts have credited Nessie with up to six humps and have described him—or her—as a serpent-like creature anywhere from 12 to more than 100 feet long.

Three British naval officers—a rear admiral, a captain and a commodore—are among the monster's staunchest supporters.

"So many people have now seen and reported its appearance," said Capt. D. J. Munro, "that their observations cannot be put down to romancing, defective vision or hysteria."

Psychologist to Lecture

The Rev. Dr. Fred Riley, psychologist and pastor of the Washington Evangelical and Reformed Church of Cincinnati, will lecture on "A Religion for Tomorrow" at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Willard Hotel under auspices of the Institute of Applied Religion and Psychology. The public is invited.

Cathedral Association Board to Elect Officers

The Board of Trustees of the National Cathedral Association will elect officers at 10 a.m. April 17 at the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral. The Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the Cathedral, will preside.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, is honorary chairman of the board.

Preparation of a new form of organization and new by-laws for the organization will be taken up. The association is similar to the "Cathedral Friends" groups associated with many English cathedrals for the purpose of increasing interest in the cathedral's work. The National Cathedral Association has 10,000 members in the United States and foreign countries.

Washington trustees include William R. Castle, Walter B. Clarkson, Richard W. Hynson, Edwin N. Lewis, C. F. R. Ogilby, the Rev. Theodore O. Wedel and the Rev. Merritt F. Williams.
